

THE CLINIC OF VIOLENCE

Rezumat: I have learnt for a long time, working as an analyst, that uncontrolled violence can turn into acted out destructivity. On the other hand, it is within the very root of the word violence that we find the special idea of force, exercised against somebody and even the idea of rape. It is well known that the real situation, as reality principle, can become a thought, violating experience for the very fragile and sensible infantile Self. All these are related to the persecutorial re-introjection of one's own destructive phantasms regarding the environment.
